Following their dramatic rescue of the royal family from rogue palace guard-bots in an apparent terrorist attack on Buckingham Palace last year, sentient robots Alex and Freddy Sharma have found themselves thrust into the national spotlight. The world's only legally recognised sentient robots, they serve as agents of R.A.I.D. - Robotics Analysis, Intelligence and Defence - defending the UK from all manner of high-tech threats. While

Lynna Levy, staff writer

There were scenes of chaos at London's annual ROBO EXPO yesterday, after the event was disrupted by an attack from a currently-unidentified robot.

During a panel debate featuring the B.I.D. director Baroness Fatima Farooq and chief science officer Nita Sharma, witnesses report that the attack could have caused multiple casualties were it not for the heroic efforts of sentient robots Alex and Freddy - the so-called 'Mega Robo Bros', who were attending the event and managed to subdue the rogue mechanoid.

Although there was significant and extensive damage to the Expo site, only a few minor injuries resulted amongst civilian bystanders at the event. There was increased security and a few robots were damaged. "The event was a success."
