Happy Monsters

This book belongs to

Battle of the Monsters

Have you ever noticed that sometimes you think sad things about yourself for no reason? It's like a cheeky unhelpful monster is telling you that no one likes you, that bad things only happen to you and that you're soooo unlucky!

Negative Neon

I won't make any friends at school.

I knew I wouldn't be picked.

No one ever wants to play my games.

I'm stupid and I always will be, that's why I failed my spelling test.

Nothing ever goes right for me.

So when this happens, we need our Happy Monsters to bounce in and put things right!

Can you see that Pinky is saying the right thing and that Neon is deliberately making everything seem wrong?

Draw a line between Neon and Pinky's opposite opinions.

Can you think of anything else that Pinky might say to beat Neon?

Positive Pinky

I can't wait to make new friends at school.

Next time I'm going to make sure I learn my spellings and I'm sure I will do better.

I'll be picked next time.

It's fun playing with my friends, it doesn't matter what game we play.

Write one thing which you are excited about for tomorrow.

A Monster's Hug!

Happiness is thinking of others.

Make this “handmade hug” and show someone how much you love them. You can send it through the post. Who will be the lucky receiver of your hug?

You will need:

A grown-up to help you with the trickier bits

Thin card

Coloured pencils or pens

scissors

Ball of String

stapler, Sticky tape or PVA glue

Envelope and Stamp

Step 1 Draw around each of your hands onto the card.

Step 2 Decorate each hand as colourfully as you can.

Step 3 Carefully cut around both outlines (or ask your grown-up).

Step 4 Pull out a piece of string as far as you can with your arms outstretched. Ask your grown-up to cut the string for you so it's the same length as your hug!

Step 5 Attach a hand to each end of the string with a staple, glue or sticky tape, with your grown-up's help.

Step 6 Your hug is ready to be posted!

No Words!

Blurt is so happy with this present that they're speechless! Help them express their feelings by finding all the happy words in the word search.
